A BLIGHTED AMBITION. BY EDWARD E. KIDDER.

They told her she could act-Oh, foolish, foolish people!
And she felt as high and mighty As the spire upon the steeple. With the callow amateur She had emphasized her "burr," While Parthenia and Juliet

Were open books to her. So she hunted up the manager; She trailed him to his lair, From the leafy lanes of Harlem To the depths of Union Square.

He wanted no Parthenias, And expressed a deep regret That Shakespeare hadn't died before He fathered Juliet. He wouldn't hear the maid recite

When told what Kankakee had thought What Keokuk had said. "My company is full," he cried, In accents coarse and loud, But I can give you six per week To go on with the crowd!"

He yawned and shook his head

She wildly staggered to an fro; She raved and tore her hair; But if you watch that playhouse "mob" I think you'll find her there!

DAD'S GAL.

BY DUDLEY WINTHROP MOORE.

Daniel Budger had been the first "prospector" to stake his claim in those diggings, and so the camp was known as Budger's Claim, and Budger himself went by the nickname of "Dad," while his daugh-ter Madge—a fair, surprisingly fair girl of eighteen, who was evidently entirely out of place among such rough people, and seemed too delicate and refined to be Budger's child—was usually referred to simply as "Dad's gal."

It was along in '49, when the gold fever was at its height in California, and every day brought crowds of fortune hunters to its lately discovered gold fields.

Dad, who passed for a widower, was a six footer, in the forties, with a fist as big as a boxing glove, and an eye as sharp as a lynx's. Whence he came nobody knew; for he was an exceedingly reticent man, who always minded his own business, and discouraged by his reserve all attempts at intimacy with him; but though naturally quiet and gentle, when roused he was a dangerous man to cross and had proven on occasion that he could handle s 'gun" with marvelous quickness and accuracy which ability alone commanded for him general respect, and caused the most lawless characters in the camp to keep prudently aloof from him.

"Good evening, Madge! All alone?"

Madge Budger sat upon a bench in front of her father's rude cabin, patching a coat. On hearing herself addressed she started and looked up, and her pretty sunburnt face turned a shade redder as she saw the man standing before her—Boyd Stanton, a handsome miner of thirty, perhaps, with a dare devil air and intelligent face, in which there were still traces of former refinement.
"Good evening, Mr. Stanton," replied the girl, in confusion. "How you frightened me!"

"Are you so easily frightened by me, Madge?"
asked Stanton, with a laugh.

"Your voice came so suddenly, Mr. Stanton."
"Mister? Why such formality, Madge? Call me Boyd. It would sound sweet from your lips," said the young man, sitting down beside the embarrassed girl.

"There you go again, Madge, with your Mister! Why can't I be simply Boyd to you?" The young girl bowed her head to hide her deep-stanton watched her, his fine eyes sparkling with "The fact is, Madge," he went on presently, "I came here today to tell you something that has been on my heart a long time. I'm in love with

The young girl started up from the bench, but Stanton caught her quickly by the arm and pulled her down again. "Listen, Madge, don't try to run away. I'm not going to eat you, although you look tempting enough to eat, to be sure. Why should my love for you shock your sensibility? Are you heart free, Madge?

Yes-oh, yes-Mr. Stanton! But please-please

Why not, Madge," interrupted the miner, "why

"You have seen better days, Mr. Stanton," s the girl now, boldly. "You are educated. I am not—that is, I have had no opportunity to get a good schooling. What little knowledge I may have I have taught myself by reading. You have been fortunate here. You will return to the East to your former friends one of these days, a rich man perhaps, and will look back with horror on your rough life here, and in the society of elegant ladies for "Nonsense, Madge!" interposed Stanton. "Drop that strain, I beg you! I love you. Isn't that enough for you?"

"You wish to marry me?" murmured Madge, un-

For all answer the miner put his arm around her suddenly and attempted to draw her to him. She resisted him bravely, however, and struck him in the face. But he only laughed wickedly and kissed her several times. Then he released the now weeping girl, saying:

Be reasonable, Madge. Listen to me. It is sundown, and your father will be home directly. He and I, you know, never could agree, so it wouldn't do for him to find me here, and see you with red eyes. He would suspect something. I know you at least like me, Madge. I want to make you love me. Let's come to an understanding. Meet me secretly tonight and we will talk the matter over quietly. Be at Cedar Ledge, down by the brook, at midnight. Your father will be asleep then, for he seldom goes out nights, like the rest of them —"

ing a merry song, and which came from the woods back of the cabin, cut the speaker short. "Father!" exclaimed Madge, starting up. "Oh, go, Mr. Stanton-go!"

"Remember, tonight, at Cedar Ledge, Madge!" said the young man quickly, squeezing the girl's hand. Then he glided away into the bushes and

A minute or two later Dad Budger showed him-self in the door of the cabin, in which Madge was now apparently very busy over the little cooking

"Hello, gal!" was his greeting, as Madge turned her face toward the entrance. "How is it you

At that moment the sound of a man's voice sing-ag a merry song, and which came from the woods old power of fascination, he thought, with a conceited smile, and walked to and fro by the brook, expectant and listening.

Presently he saw a dark figure gliding through the trees, a fluttering garment. This time he was not mistaken—it was Madge! Dad Budger arose at daybreak, as was his wont, dressed in haste, and called to Madge, who slept in a space partitioned off from that which he was pleased to call his bedro

'Madge, get up, gal, day is dawning!" There was no answer. "Madge, don't you hear, gal?"

Sure enough, Dad Budger, to the surprise of allfor Budger, who rarely drank, was never seen in a saloon at such an early hour-entered the place at

'Morning, boys," he said, stepping to the bar, "Patsy, fil up all 'round on my account." Then, turning to the crowd, he asked, carelessly: "Have any of you boys seen Boyd Stanton this morning?"

"No," said several. "I seen him last evenin'," said Bob, with a malicious look. "Where?" asked Dad, quickly.

"Up by your cabin." "At what hour ?"

habit? And you even don't run to meet me now," he added, in a voice of disappointment. "Why, gal, 'pon my soul, your eyes are red! What—been crying?" didn't come to meet me this evening, as is your

He stepped quickly toward her, and, placing both his big toil hardened hands upon her shoulders, tried to look into her downcast eyes. "Look up, gal," he said, coaxingly. "Tell me

You haven't been in your usua spirits of late; I noticed it but said nothing—but my heart bled for you all the same. What's the matter with you, gal? Does this rough life wear you out Have patience a few months longer, and then, if my good luck keeps up, I will be able to take you 'Frisco and let von live like a lady. It's for your sake-for your sake alone, Madge, that I'm toiling so hard now. Have courage !

so hard now. Have courage!"
She looked up at him, into his kind, weather beaten face, and threw her arms about his neck.
"Dear, good father!" she said. "Hove you! Don't mind my gloomy moods. Come, I will get supper, and, withdrawing from his embrace, she went abouther work, humming the song she had heard Dace sing in the woods just now.

Down by Cedar Ledge Boyd Stanton waited, with growing impatience, for Madge. It must have been already past midnight, and still she did not come. Suddenly he thought he heard a broken branch on the ground snap, and, straining his eyes to pene trate the darkness, he called softly:

"Is that you, Madge?"
But no reply came. Only the foliage rustling in the gentle breeze broke the stillness.

Notwithstanding her resistance to him early in the evening, he felt sure she would come. Had he not, in his former life, when he was a fascinating man of fashion, before he had dissipated his for-tune and wandered west with the stream of adven-turers toward the new El Dorado, ensuared the hearts of women much higher placed than this Still no answer.

Surprised, for Madge was invariably stirring at the gray of dawn, Budger knocked on the partition.

Then, really alarmed, as he thought of her rec eyes the evening before, he opened the door in the partition, and looked into the little space. The faint light that penetrated through a small dow helped show him Madge's bed unoccupied "Madge not here! Madge didn't sleep here las he exclaimed. "My God! what does it

He staggered back into the kitchen, and sunk down upon a chair.

"What does it mean?" he repeated to himself

Then he thought of Madge's red eyes again, and, with a heaving breast, began to reflect deeply.

Perhaps for half an hour he sat there almost his face buried in his hands; then, straightening himself all at once, he arose, with a fierce, frightful expression of determination in his furrowed face vent to a shelf, took from it two heavy calibre re olvers, stuck them in his belt, and strode out of the cabin.

In Patsy Clune's saloon the early birds were satching the worms in the shape of generous "eye-openers."

Said one unkempt miner, as he put down his glass "Boyd Stanton, I reckon, is goin' ter die with his boots on—tenderfoot that he be."

"What's up, Bob?" asked one.
"I seen him hangin' 'round Dad's cabin yester day, nigh sundown."

half whistled another. "Dad'll lay him out fur sartain. He's told him ter keep away from " said the one called Bob, "here comes Dad hisself.

"About sundown."

What was he doing there

Dad's voice trembled a little as he asked this 'Talkin' to your gal," replied Bob. "I jest got er glimpse o' them as I cum through the woods."

A dark cloud seemed to pass over Budger's face, and, turning suddenly away, he walked out of the saloon without saying another word.

"Boyd Stanton's er dead man" remarked Bob, with a sardonic grin. "That'll settle my score with him fur gettin' ther drop on me last month

Fill 'em up once more, Patsy!"

Two days later the sudden disappearance of Boyd Stanton, Dad's gal and of Dad himself from Budger's claim began to be wondered at by some, but the knowing ones said to each other: "I told you so!"

Three months had rolled away, when, one fine afternoon, a robust, rough looking man, wearing a slouched hat, pulled down as if to disguise his eyes, and with his dress concealed by a long, shabby overcoat, reaching almost to the heels of his dusty cowhide boots, walked up the front steps of a pretty fittle house standing in a suburb of San Francisco and knocked at the door.

A plump, youngish woman, with a pleasant face, answered the knock,

"Does Mr. Boyd Stanton live here?" asked the visitor, and receiving an answer in the affirmative he inquired further:

"Is Madge-Mrs. - ?" He hesitated, seemingly "Oh, sir," said the woman, sorrowfully, "are you a friend of—hers?"

"Yes," replied the stranger, in a trembling voice

"What has happened? Tell me, quick!" said the man, excitedly. "I am her father, Daniel Budger, of Budger's Claim mining camp. For three months I have been looking for my poor, lost darling!" And the strong man swallowed a sob.

"Oh, come in, sir—come in!" said the woman, warmly. "I will tell you all I know." And when they were in the sitting room, she told him that, although only the cook, Madge, broken down by the cruel, unhappy life she led with the man who passed there for her husband, had taken her into her confidence and told her how she had been lured from the camp to her ruin by Stanton, who had exercised an irresistible power over her

"I did all I could to comfort the poor dear," said the good woman, "and make ber hard life easier. She was continually talking to me about you, sir, and loved you, I dare say, better than any daughter ever loved a father. And it was only this morning she was speaking about you and the great grief her dight must have caused you—just a few min-ntes before he struck her again."

"Struck her!" exclaimed Budger, springing to "Struck nerve exclaimed budger, springing to his feet and gesturing wildly, as he began to pace up and down the room. "He struck her?" "Oh, yes, sir—often. And many a time I interfered, only to get struck in my turn. She was beg-ging him this morning to abide by his promise and save her unborn child from disgrace by marrying her, when he struck her in the face."

Dad Budger stopped short in his feverish walk and stared at the speaker a moment in silence;

then he said, hoarsely:
"What, she will become a mother? And he struck her and spurned her prayer to make good his promise r^a Oh, the vile wretch—coward—brute —seducer!" raged Dad. "My God! And she's gone, you say?"

"Yes; after the terrible scene this morning she went away, telling me she would never return. And now I'm only waiting for Mr. Stanton to come back, to give up the keys and leave myself." At that moment the front door was heard to open quickly, and a heavy step approached the sitting room. Dad Budger turned sharply toward the closed door and threw open his overcoat.

The next instant the door swung back, and Boyd Stanton, somewhat elegantly dressed, stood on the threshold.

"Boyd Stanton!"
"Dad Budger!"

These two cries were almost simultaneous, and both men made the same movement; only Dad's arms flew up a little the quickest, each hand grasping a revolver, and he fired once, twice, three times in rapid succession, when Stanton, who had fired but one shot, recled, and fell prone upon the floor. Budger stepped up to the motionless body and surveyed it a moment with grim calmness; then, giving it a contemptuous kick, he hurried from the house, leaving the speechless, terror stricken woman wringing her hands.

It was twilight. The Sacramento flowed on with a soft murmur. For two hours Budger had been walking slowly along the banks, looking into the water in a dreamy way, his eyes blurred with tears. There was no doubt in his mind that Madge, in her despair, had drowned herself. But, cost what it might—all his hard earned gold he would spend, if need be—he would recover her body.

And he walked on, to and fro, for a long stretch dreaming, looking into the water, as if he hoped to see the body already rise to the surface. The twilight was deepening around him, and its shadows added to his ioneliness. Finally, as he turned a bend in the bush grown bank, he came suddenly upon the figure of a woman standing close to the water's edge, with her back to him.

He stood still a moment, then sprang forward with a glad cry;

"Madge, gal!" He held her fast in his trembling arms.

She did not cry out, she did not speak; she simply boked at him with a sort of mute terror in her sad Speak, Madge, gal-for God sake! 'Tis I, Dad Budger! Don't shrink from me! I'm not here to upbraid you, but to save you, to protect you. I know all. Boyd Stanton is dead! 'Dead?" she gasped.

'I avenged you! I shot the quickest! You must live for your child's sake, Madge, gai?'
He felt her shudder violently.

"It need not grow up in shame, Madge-you need ot hang your head as it grows up-I will be its ather! Oh, Madge, gal-" He had fallen at her feet and clasped her about the knees-"I have loved ou long—not as a father, but as a faithful lover!
was afraid to tell you the truth, for fear you would eave me! Oh! Madge, forgive me-f am not your father! The man you thought, perhaps, was going to curse you just now, 'tis he who begs you to forgive him for his his deception towards you me to marry another man, who soon forsook her You are the fruit of that unhappy marriage. Your mother died shortly after your birth. She sent to ne from her death bed, and implored me to take care of you. I swore to her that I would, how I have kept my oath, you know, gal! man of rough surface, but my heart has always been tender for you, Madge, gal! Be my wife! Let me be the father of your unborn child!" She slipped, sobbing, into his arms.

"Oh. Dad," she said, then, in a choked voice, "I

MANAGERS GEORGE CASTLE AND JOHN D. HOPKINS, after lengthy deliberation and consideration of the existing conditions in vaudeville, have brought into shape the much talked of combination, to be styled the Western Circuit of Vaudeville Theatres, with headquarters in Chicago, and to be opened in the Dexter building, st Adams Street, in that city, after July 19. Messra. Hopkins and Castle state that in forming this combination they considered the unsatisfactory conditions by which a vaudeville performer was compelled to move around in uncertain jumps in order to fill three or four weeks in the West, constantly running against a disagreeable, and to them decidedly unprofitable, friction between managers that interfered with their engagements, and that they set about in the interest of mutual advantages to combine the theatres, to promote harmony where the performer has suffered in the past and to put a stop to the operations of the irresponsible managers who trade on the guilibility of the public and the honorable customs of the profession. All this was done with the hope that the extended facilities provided in such a combination performers would be able to secure engagements without enforced idleness at any time, and by this means a satisfactory standard of salaries could be established and maintained. Messrs. Castle and Hopkins require little introduction to the profession. They announce that they were the first managers in the Western field to lense and open high class theatres to this popular form of entertainment, and that they have done everything to elevate and promote the vaudeville interests in the West. They anticipate a recognition of the fact that they have now brought into existence the most promising combination of forces for mutual benefit of performer and manager that has ever been formed in the West. C., and will lay off until Aug. 6, when they will open at the Casino, at Colonial Beac MANAGERS GEORGE CASTLE AND JOHN D. HOPKINS,

NEW YORK CITY.

Last Week's Events.—Theatrical affairs were exceedingly duil during the past week. Upon the opening night thereof a severe rain storm caused many vacant seats to be in evidence at all places of aminement save one, which had been liberally papered, proving that inclement weather has no terrors for the holders of theatrical shows. For the remainder of the week the weather was generally fast and the attendance improved, but was nevertheless far from satisfactory. There has been no change in the prospect for the coming season. The distant horizon is still a gloomy line, unidum med by any sign of dawning prosperity. Probably the usual number of farcical plays will be sent on tour, and there will be a goodly array of repertory companies and ministrel and vandeville organizations, but there is little talk of heavy ventures. Reports received from some of the large shows now making their accustomed summer tours tell of duil business everywhere, and unless there is a material improvement of business before Fall the coming season will be disastrous. This is not a pessential. Last Week's Events .- Theatrical affairs were making their accustomed Summer tours tell of dull business everywhere, and unless there is a material improvement of business before Fall the coming season will be disastrous. This is not a pessimistic view of the situation, nor is it by any means apparent to us alone, for many managers, seeing the dangers ahead, have determined to remain idle next season rather than invest their capital when the odds are so heavily against them. The amusement field has for several years been too greatly crowded, especially that portion of it which embraces the smaller cities and towns, and a lessening of the number of road attractions will be of great henefit to all concerned. The player and performer will suffer in idleness, it is true, but such suffering may be more readily endured than that resulting from loss of salary earned in the ranks of companies stranded by the way. The final relief from this overcrowding of the theatrical field will result from the enlarging of its boundaries, and American companies will ere long swarm in those lands where their visits herefore have field will result from the enlarging of its boundaries, and American companies will ere long swarm in those lands where their visits heretofore have been few and far between. It is now well known that two of the largest Summer road attractions will desert this country next season for a tour of England, and scores of theatrical managers are striving to obtain for their attractions in London such footing as has been secured by Charles Frohman for the attractors which he controls. Australia is also an inviting field, and if we gain tralia is also an inviting field, and if we gain new possessions in the Pacific the influx of people into Hawaii will make it a profitable stope on the route.....The only continued for the week ending July 17 was "The Whirl of the Town," at the Casino Variety en-tertainment was furnished at Tony Paston's, the NION SQUARE, PROCTOR'S, OLYMPIA, the CENTRAL OPERA HOUSE, the ICE PALACE MUSIC HALL and the CASINO ROOF GARDEN..... The auditorium of CASINO ROOF GARDEN......The auditorium of MADISON SQUARE GARDEN was thrown open July 12 for the first metropolitan presentation of "Captain Cook," a comic opera, in three acts, book by Sands W. Forman and music by Noah Brandt. The work proved to be a fairly acceptable offering for the proved to be a rainy acceptance onering to the Summer season, but the venture will doubt-iess fail from the same causes which recently necessitated the closing of an uptown music half— the vastness of the auditorium and its lack of acoustic properties. The public is not inclined to pay admission to a beer garden where the gate re-ceipts are expended on a stage performance which cannot be heard, and which offers little enjoyment to the eye. Anent the presence by invitation of Ex-Queen Liliuokaiani at the first performance here of this opera, there is a remarkable perversion of courtesy in the practice which prevails in this city of justing the courtes. ity of inviting foreign dignitaries to be present at performances wherein the people and customs of heir native lands are grossly burlesqued. Spanish princess was invited to witness "1492;" Chinese officials were present to witness the first performance here of "The Mandarin," and now a dethroned queen has added to her misfor-tunes that which she might well regard as an affort. We can readily imagine the anger that would swell in the bosom of an American were he KRITH'S UNION SQUARE THEATRE. - Summer vaudeville, presented amid the vishing of fans and the gurgle of ice water, continues to add coin galore to the goodly supply a ready garnered in this field by Manager Keith's representatives. The passing of last week's bill left a decidedly favorable passing of last week's bill left a decidedly favorable impression on all who saw it, and the work done by Ezra Kendall, Alf. Grant, and Biggar and Haverly will keep this week's headliners spurred on to their best efforts. The audience Monday evening, July 19, evidently appreciated the excellent amusement which was being served to them, as the applause was frequent and well directed. Lizzle Evans, whom we once knew as "the Little Electric Battery," presented a neat one act, "A Strange Cat Astrophe," with the assistance of Harry Mills, and, in testimony of the fact that she still retains many volts of popularity, it can be said that she induced more people to drop their paim fans and applaud than did any other act on the bill. George Thatcher and Ed. Marble gave their comedy dialogue in an effective manner, and were encored and applauded. Phyllis Rankin promised to do her Held imitation at this house weeks ago, but failed, for an unknown reason, to connect. She can now appreciate how much her postponement was deplored by patrons, as it was a case of "fans down" and much applause when she had finished her delineation of the underdressed Anna. Miss Rankin can register another success in her ledger of achievements. Much approval followed the dancing of John and Bertha Gleeson, and the audience also bestowed its favor upon the Carlisle Sisters, the Schrode Brothera, Hacker and Lester, Montague and Weat, Jose Bardine, the Randalls, Vila Sayne, Campbell and Caulfield, Frankle St. John, Flaikowsky, May Hoey and Mark Bennett, whose specialties rounded out the programm in excellent shape. Tony Pastor's Theatre.—There was a crowded ouse here Monday, July 19, when a very excellent bill went on review, to the evident great amuse-ment of all in attendance. Frank E. McNish and John J. Cain are the features, and their entertaining comedy act was much appreciated. Although a long time absent, Mr. McNish has lost none of his popularity, and Mr. Cain was well remembered for long time absent, Mr. McNish has lost none of his popularity, and Mr. Cain was well remembered for his work with a former partner. Rena and Blanche Washburo, who constitute the new Washburo Sisters, wiff all the methods of the old pair retained, opend their return engagementauspiclously. They dress neatly, sing and act with spirit, and received a pleasing degree of approval for all that they did. Maud Nugent continued her engagement without discarding her stunning green dress or any of her songs, although she might better give the stip to one or two selections, which are too broad to even come under the generous classification of "risque." There was plenty of applause in the audience for all the songs. Edward and Josie Evans revived an old act successfully. Van Leer and Barton kept the house in an uproar with their black face specialty, and the Four Westons gave their amusing and diversified specialty to an appreciative constituency. Strong in popularity were the Nelson Tito, dancers, singers and Joke crackers of unusual effectiveness. Sheffer and Blakely, in their funny blackface act; the Seven Reed Birds, strong favorites here; the Monroe Sisters, dancers; Lillian Melbourne, vocalist and banjoist; Albertus and Weston, club jugglers, and Lew H. Carroll, who offered an annusing monologue specialty, rounded out the excellent bill entertainingly. Another good bill is booked for next week, in which the Elinore Sisters will be prominent in an act then to be presented for the lirst time. Curtis and Gordon's boxing and bail punching act, and other equally clever specialities will be included in the bill.

KOSTER & BIAL'S .- Although skies lowered on Monday night, July 19, the rain kept aloof, and a large audience enjoyed the performance in the roof garden of this house. A feature of the perform-ance was the reappearance of Troja upon the scene ance was the reappearance of Troja upon the scene of her former victories. She sang new and up to date songs in her usual felching style, and was rapturously applatided. May Howard's budget of songs was likewise favorably received, and the fair singer had no reason to doubt her strong hold upon metropolitan audiences. Mardo's clown juggiling act continued in high favor, and the Rogers Brothers were, as usual, a laughing success. The Beaumont Sisters, in songs and dances; Adelman and Lowe, Xyloptone soloists, and William De Boe, head balancer, won enthusiastic applause. Florence Bindley again received the hearty applause which greeted her reappearance last week, and Bonnie Lottle, danscuse, and Graig, contortionist, won a liberal share of admiration and plaudits.

Procycok's Theaters.—Not even the most fastidi-

PROCTOR'S THEATRE .- Not even the most fastidi ous can bestow anything save praise upon the programme for the present week, for, what with the introduction of a worthy performer who has but recently been acquired from the legitimate ranks, and the presentation of a number of acts that have and the presentation of a number of acts that have won an envisible reputation in vaudeville, none but a pessimist could have failed to derive pleasure from the performance on July 19. Jennie Yeamans' excellent speciality is rapidly winning for her a high place in the vaudeville lover's estimation, while Eugene Sanger proved thoroughtly entertaining in his varied character sketches. Hastings and Marion, in "The Road to Ruin," held the attention of their auditors from beginning to end of their capable sketch, and brought to themselves no sims! share of the evening's plaudits, and Leo and Chapman contributed a horizontal bar act that for genuine merit and incidental comedy would be hard to equal. Marie De Wolf's baton twirling was worthy a deal of commendation. The Leroys, in ball room dances, furnished an agreeable contribution, and the one act comedicta, "My Luttle French Wife," as interpreted by Frank Ely and Frances Brooke, was favorably received. Others, whose efforts served to lengthen out the bill, were Frances Loeb, in negro songs and dances; Dollie Lafferia, in songs and dances; Oll Bros., comedians: Three Franchonette Sisters, acrobatic dancers and singers; Marguerite ashton, vocalist, and Fred Valmore, comedian. won an enviable reputation in vaudeville, none bu

Kara, the juggler; Herr Grais, with his trained baboon and donkey; the Dunbar Sisters, with their display of lingerie; the Gehrue Sisters, in pleasing dances, and James Thornton, singer, were retained from the previous week, evidently much to the satisfaction of the audience. The Couture Bros., acrobats, won unstinted applause, and Webb and Hassan, head to head balancers, had the seal of approval placed upon their act. Genaro and Bailey presented a cake walk act that was well received, Cora Routt Lad a hearty welcome, and Juno Salmo, contortionist, won cordial marks of appreciation.

The curio list compiled for this week features Capt. The variety bill features the Berarks, Harry S., Marion, Sadie Probst, the Lees, and Brooke and Raymond, and the stock company presents "Rip Van Winkle."

NEW YORK STATE.

Brooklyn,—The kinetoscope pictures did not prove a gigantic success, and after a stay of two weeks at the Park left for other fields. The rainy weather of the past week interfered considerably with the arrangements at the different seaside re-sorts, and it will take some time to repair the damsorts, and it will take some time to repair the dam-age done by the storm at some of the places. a rich harvest, will find the sea breezes too chilling to be profitable.

MANHATTAN BEACH.—The twentieth anniversary was celebrated at this resort on July 19, when a jubilee time occurred. Sousa had prepared an elaborate programme for the occasion, including some of the marches made famous by the late P. S. Gilmore, as well as others of merit, while De Woif Hopper, Neilie Bergen, the prima doma of the "El Capitan" company, and Alfred Klein, 18 low comedian, sang several songs, and a corps of gunners fired off a cannon in accompaniment to the marches. Many humorous features were given during the "El Capitan" performance. There were day fireworks and night fireworks, while Pain's Turko Grecian war was fought with all the flerceness that could be infused into it.

BERLEN BEACH.—New features are added each week. Among them, for the current days, are Herr Granada, who gives a perilous exhibition on the high wire over Jamaica Bay every afternoon and evening, doing all sorts of odd things while on his aerial perch. He calls his act "Bachelor's Hall in Mid Alr," because one of his tricks is to take a cook stove out upon the wire and there prepare a light repast before the astonished eyes of the spectators who gather to witness his performances. At the Casino the second edition of the local travesty, "Little Miss Brooklyn," is engaging a good run. To distinguish it from its predecessor, the revised edition has been changed and made so much better that it seems like a new performance. There are other interesting attractions down there, but none draw like Adams & Woodger's International Water Circus, which has put on a new force in the water this week.

BROOKLYN MUSIC HALL.—This week's bill is headed by the three Lane Sisters. Others are the Greater New York Trio, Kilroy and Rawson, in their comedy stereopticon act; Ida Russell, soubrette; Coakley and Husted, in a sketch; M. J. Fenton, dancer, and Flawton and Dunn, in their sketch, entitled "Pastimes on the Levee." The concerts on Sunday, which are now free, are largely a

He afterwards worked alone in Gas, Hill's Novelties, and with Sam T. Jack's Creoles. During the last named engagement he formed a partnership with May Bohee, which lasted until May, 1896. In our Providence letter it is erroneously stated that Ben Hunn is deceased.

The annual Henley-on-Thames regatta, which has steadily increased in interest to Americans because of the entries of native oarsmen in the great English aquatic event, was held this year July 14-16, and ended in a blaze of glory by the victory of E. H. Ten Eyck in the final heat for the Diamond Sculls. Americans held high carnival every day of the races, as Dr. W. S. Thirty Footers Compete.

Newport, R. I., watermen would be lost without their frequent settos between thirty foot yachts, and the present season's festivities have already been inaugurated. On July 15 the racing resulted as follows: tillman

Tommy Burns, the well known diver, who had safely performed many dangerous feats, having plunged from different London bridges, as well as off the Forth Bridge, and once dived into the Thames River from a train as it was passing over Barnes Bridge, met his death on July 6 in simply diving from the pier at Rhyl, Eng. An eye witness says that as he was going down he turned in the air and fell on his back into the water. He did not sink, and the tide carried him a little towards the bathing vans and then back again towards the pier. Two gentlemen then strip ed, and, entering the water, recoverd the body. Burns had then been in the water from five to ten minutes. No one saw any movement as of life after he fell into the seas.

J. A. Jarvis won the one mile amateur swimming championship of England, contended for at the West India Docks, London, on July 3. To the suprise of all he defeated the apparently invincible champion at all distances, J. H. Tyers, who steered badly, finishing second. The time, 32m.54½s., was poor.

PRESIDENT BARON CAMOYS, of the Henley Regatta President Baron Camoys, of the Henley Regatta Committee, died at his home, Henley, Eng., July 14. the first day of the regatta. He had been long officially associated with the Henley Regatta Committee and was an enihusiastic and popular patron of aquatic sports. He was forty-one years of age. Dr. McDowell, of the Delaware Boat Club, Chicago, lil., won his trial heat in the race for the London Cup at the Metropolitan Amateur Regatta, Putney, Eng., July 19, but was defeated in the final by H. T. Blackstaffe, who won the race by four lengths.

HALF RATER TRIALS.

Momo Selected to Try for the Seawanhaka-Corinthian Trophy.

The trial races to select a challenger for the Seawanhaka-Corinthian small boat trophy, now held by the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club, were resumed Wednesday, July 14, the fleet having been too generally maimed by the high wind on the opening day of the contest to admit of several of them starting Tuesday, as scheduled. The courses were laid out on Oyster Bay, L. I. Sound, by the supervising committee, and were as follow:

Triangular course.—From across a line between Centre Island Buoy, of the entrance to Oyster Bay, Long Island Sound, and the committee steamer anchored southeast of the same. E. by N. half N.—Two miles to and around a mark bearing a red bail, leaving it on the port hand. N. W.—Two miles to and around a mark bearing a red bail, leaving it on the port hand. S. by W. half W.—Two miles to the finish line between Centre Island Buoy and the committee steamer anchored northwest of the same. Course to be sailed over twice; total distance, twelve nautical miles. On the second round yachts will leave Centre Island Buoy on the port hand. The race committee may, in their discretion, direct the course to be sailed in the reverse direction. The course to windward or leeward and return is this: From a line between Centre Island Buoy and the committee steamer to and around a mark bearing a red bail, leaving it on the starboard hand; distance, two miles and return; course to be sailed over three times; total distance, twelve nautical miles. The direction will be signalled by the general yacht signal code from the committee steamer, at least fifteen minutes before the preparatory signal.

The wind was light and variable on Wednesday afternoon, when the second race was sailed on the windward and leeward course, and Momo, winner of the first race, again proved her ability by winning as decisively in the fair weather as she did in the glace which blew the first day of the trials. Skate again hugged the leader better than the rest of the first race, again

Momo was again to the front, although the race was not entirey completed because of the lack of wind. Skate was second in the drifting match, with the others strung along the route.

The fourth trial race took place Saturday, 17. Its result was a complete surprise, as Momo, the previously invincible little fellow, sailed by C. H. Crane, was very badly beaten by Alanka, sailed by liarry Crane, a brother to the previously successful skipper. The committee, on July 19, decided the Momo was the best all 'round boat and she will therefore weather was dull and threatening and the atmosphere heavy, while a high wind prevailed, which was not at all to the liking of, either contestants or spectators, the latter not being nearly so numerous as in former years—a fact due alike to the threatening character of the weather and the unusual lack of quality in the entries. The meeting was not characterized by anything sensational, save in the case of the champion walker, Sturgess, who won the four miles walk in grand style, creating fresh records for four and five miles. The track was dry in spots, but was generally heavy and the going exspots, but was generally heavy and the going extremely bad, considerable scratching running the fields as a consequence. For the bistaff Stakes, the feature of the card, six two year olds made the start, and when the smoke cleared up the judges sighted the Kensico Stable's Juda in the lead, with L'Alouette second and Colonial Dame third, the last mentioned two, a Thompson pair, being coupled in the betting, odds on favorites. This was not the only shock of the afternoon for the talent, as Orion, the even money favorite for the sixth race, showed no better than third to the lead of Successful, with High Daddy second. They cleared up a great killing on the afternoon, however, as the other winners, Harry Reed, Estaca, Sanders and Hanlon, were all favorites at odds on. Ance Saturday afternoon, 17, to a crowd of large proportions, and the returns for the journey in good sport were highly satisfactory to all who good sport were highly satisfactory to all who made the trip. The crowning feature of the day was the exciting finish in the race for the Test Stakes, when Lehman, Ben Eder, Premier and The Swain finished closely bunched, placed in the order given. It was an exciting drive through the stretch, and the crowd enjoyed it greatly. This was not the only excellent race, as the victories of the remaining winners, Manchester, George Boyd, Lincoln II, Abuse and Decide, were none of them easily accomplished. The really excellent list of candidates in the Test Handicap was depleted before the horses went to the post by the withdrawal of The Winner, Belmar, Brandywine and Chum to the great disappointment of the crowd. A. B. C., New Haven.—1. It is impossible to state when and where the first dramatization of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was produced. The first production in this country was of C. W. Taylor's version, which was first seen at the National Theatre, this city, Aug. 23, 1852. It was a failure, and was withdrawn after a run of only eleven performances. The version of George L. Aiken was the second one brought out in this country. It was first performed at the Troy (N. Y.) Museum, Sept. 27, 1852. It ran for one hundred nights at that house, and was then transferred to the stage of the Albany Theatre. 2. "The Black Crook" was first produced at Niblo's, this city, Sept. 12, 1866.

CARDS.

CARDS.

J. A. Y., Hotel Champlain.—When a player at cassino makes a build, and his opponent declines to build it higher, the former player may not alter his build, but must take it with a card of like denomination; but he can make another build, or pair or combine any other cards, or capture an opponent's build, before taking up his first build. It is optional with him as to which he takes up first, J. A. M., Montreal.—When a call is made all the players who stayed in must show their full hands to the board.

J. E. S., Jersey City.—The last trick counts ton.

J. E. S., Jersey City.—The last trick counts ten for the player who takes it, and he is entitled to call out if this count makes the requisite 1,000 points constituting game.

B. M., New York.—Here is the rule bearing on the matter: "A player cannot score any points he has meided, and which are standing to his credit, until he has taken a trick." In many coteries, however, it is the custon to "meid out with the fall of a trick," and the "rule of the house" prevails in such matters.

F. L. B., Portland.—1. At seven up the dealer counts one point every time he turns up jack, save when a misdeal occurs before jack is turned. It is optional with the dealer to "give one" or run the cards to another trump. When playing three handed, if the dealer give one he must give both. 2. In case of a tie for game the elder hand scores the point.

J. H. D., Worcester.—I. It means that the batsman must be declared out if he hits a fly ball that is either caught or muffed by an infleider, when first or second bases are occupied, or first, second or third with only one out. P. S., San Antonio.—We cannot undertake to decide, for two reasons. The length of the River Nile is not definitely known, and even if it were it is probable that authorities would disagree as to it, as they disagree as to the Mississippi. According to the guess work that now obtains, there is but fifty miles difference between the length of the Nile and that of the Amazon. Then, again, some authorities recognize such a river as the Missouri-Mississippi, while some regard the Missouri as one river and the Mississippi as another. The Missouri-Mississippi is as much more longer than the Amazon than the Nile is guessed to be longer than the Amazon than the Nile is guessed to be longer than the Amazon than the Nile lies guessed to be longer than the Amazon than the Nile lies guessed to be longer than the Amazon than the Nile lies guessed to be longer than the Amazon than the Ombined length of the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers is not greater than 4,500 miles.

Edward H. Ten Eyck, whose portrait graces this began the youngest exponent of the art of rowing within our recollection to attain such a prominent position as he occupies. He was born at Perkskill, N. Y., Aug. 7, 1879, and is therefore not yet quite eighteen years of age, yet he holds championships won at the annual regattas of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen of America and the New England Amateur Rowing Assoica and the New England Amateur Rowing Association. He stands 5ft. 8½in. in height, without shoes, and weighed in condition the past season 155ib. He is a worthy son of the veteran professional oarsman, James A. Ten Eyck, who has figured prominently in the annals of American sculling for many years, is still in harness, and presents a living example of the beneficial effects of physical exercise and a life devoid of excesses. Young Ten Eyck's racing career began during the season of 1895, when, during his school vacailon, he joined the Wachusett Boat Club, of Worcester, Mass, of which organization his father was the coach and had charge of the preparation of the club's eight oared crew for the national regatta. He developed very rapidly, as he was almost constantly on the water in his father's shell. His first race was a private trial between him and a club mate, rowed about a week before the Labor Dayregatta of the New England Amateur Rowing Association in 1895, for the purpose of selecting the best sculler to represent the club in the junior scull race at said regatta. This race Ten Eyck won handlily, and he was immediately entered for the event named, which he won in handy fashion on the Charles River, at Boston, he never being headed and eventually winning by a long distance. He was then entered for the junior sculls at the Boston regatta of that year, which event he easily won. Then he was sent to represent the club at the annual national regatta, held on Saratoga Lake, Aug. 12, 13, where he secured the title of intermediate champion sculler. He next appeared at the Labor Day regatta of the New England Association, exciation. He stands 5ft. 81/2 in. in height, without pecting to meet J. J. Whitehead, senior scull cham-pion, and McGuire, but they did not enter, which caused him great disappointment. He won the race hands down, and then intimated in print that he was prepared to row either Whitehead or Mc-Guire a match race for a suitable prize. The former closed with the offer, and a match was made to row one and a half miles, with a turn. The match was decided on Lake Quinsigamond, Oct. 1, and after a good contest past the turn Ten Eyck demonstrated decided on Lake Quinsigamond, Oct. 1, and after a good contest past the turn Ten Eyck demonstrated his superior ability by going to the front and remaining there to the end, winning by about one and a half lengths, in om. 583/8. This victory sent the youthful champion's stock away up, and added considerably to the confidence his father reposed in his superior prowess. This confidence led to a quick decision to send the youngster abroad, to endeavor to accomplish what other American scullers had failed in attempting—to bring to this side of the Atlantic the Diamond Sculis, constituting the main scullers' prize at the annual Henley Royal Regatta, on the Thames. How well the subject of our sketch acquitted himself at that historic spot in the world of oars is graphically told in the cable report of his performances at the big carnival which appears on another page. The phenomenal record he has made during his brief career with the sculis indicates that, as he is constantly gaining strength as he develops physically, and by practice on the water and, in the gymnasium is steadily improving in skill, he will place his name considerably higher on the role of fame during the ensuing few years, while the semior sculls at the next national regatta appears to be quite at his mercy. Ten Eyck has not yet completed his schooling, and will resume his studies in Worcester immediately upon his return from abroad. He is a young man of good disposition, exemplary habits, attentive to his studies, and is a great favorite with his fellow citizens in the old New England city, where he will be tendered a grand reception when he once again sets foot on his native soil.

Thanks to The Eagle for giving the first tabular renume we have seen of the personal results to each contestant in the research of the personal results to each contestant in the research of the future. Our enterprising neighbor says:

"With the conclusion of the Ladies' International Chess Tournament another event unique in the history of the game became a thing of the past. The feat of Miss Rudge in surviving the nineteen rounds without once meeting defeat is a record that stands unequalled in international chess, and stamps her as probably the strongest woman player living. Mrs. Showatter, wife of the ex-American champion, might possibly equal her in playing strength, but hardly in endurence, so that Miss Rudge may justly lay claim to the world's championship. "Mrs. Fagan and Miss Thoroid likewise made fine records in capturing second and third prizes, while fourth prize rewarded the xecellent efforce representative in the tournament. Those who are acquainted with the latter's abilities will be able to form an opinion concerning those of the three contestants that led her in the race. In the meantime the scores of the games, which alone can furnish a true idea of the qualities of the play, are being eagerly awaited.

State Association's Outing.

State Association's Outing.

By the courtesy of the president, a copy of the handsome circular of the coming midsummer outing, at Murray Hill, 1,000 Islands, is on our table There in the act are at deal in it that we have not already say, in fact. The circular repeats the attractive fers. It is agreeable to read that one thing which was before only a proposition is now announced as a fixture, the "Interstate Contest," N. Y. Ch. As'on vs. that of Pennsylvania, to be played by teams of six or eight a side.

The tournaments will begin at 2,30 P. M. Tuesday, Aug. 3. "It should be borne in mind that the State cheek association is an amateur organization, and large each prizes are discountenanced by the members. Farsas expecting to play should bring their own boards and chessmen."

A supplementary circular containing time tables, also a complete programme of the various courses at the banquet, will be lasued in due season. Cincinnati vs. New York.

The Cincinnatis defeated the New Yorks on July 13, at Cincinnati, O., by bunching their hits in the 13, at clincinnati, O., by bunching their hits in the fourth inning, and scoring four runs after two men had been put out. They added one more in the seventh on an error by Gleason. The visitors but ted Breitenstein hard and often, but sharp fielding enabled him to keep the hits well apart, the New Yorks never being able to score more than a single run in any inning. There was considerable wranging done by both teams, caused by a drizzling rain, but Umpire O'Day kept them in the field until after the close of the fifth inning, when he suspended play for some minutes. In strict violation of the letter and spirit of the rules, rows of chairs were lined up on the field in front of the grand stand, and were filled with the nosiest of the home "rooters," apparently for the purpose of disconcerting the visiting players, but the dismai shrieks and demon how's did not have the effect desired.

Louisville vs. Philadelphia.

These teams played two games on July 13, at Louisville, Ky., and the Philadelphias won both. One was a game postponed by rain on May 15, when the Phillies were on their first visit to that city this season. In the opening game the errors city this season. In the opening game the errors made by the locals proved costly, as the visitors earned only one run off Frazer's delivery. Orth, too, pitchedgood ball, holding the home team down to five safe hits, including a home run drive by Frazer, but they were bunched to a good advantage, earning all of the runs scored by them. Geler and Gillen fielded finely, accepting all of sixteen chances between them. Delehanty led in batting, with four timely safe hits.

Cleveland vs. Boston.

Superior batting helped the Clevelands to a vic-tory over the Bostons on July 13, at Cleveland, O. Lewis was very erratic in his delivery, giving eight men their base on balls, making a wild pitch, beside this he was batted hard and often. Errors by the vis Lewis was very erratic in his delivery, giving eight men their base on balls, making a wild pitch, beside this he was batted hard and often. Errors by the visitors at critical stages added several unearned runs to the home team's credit. Cuppy was a trife wild in his delivery in the opening inning, but after that he settled down and did good work. Burkett led in batting. His three hits included a home run, while the other long safe hits were triple baggers by Wallace, Stahl and Bergen, and doubles by Childs, Tebeau and Stahl. The batting of Burkett and Stahl and Wallace's fielding were features.

He is a young man yet, and should improve with experience. He is a general utility man on the Washington team, of the National League and American Association, and has filled all of the outfield positions, as well as those of second and third bases. He is a Philadelphian, having been born in that city on Feb. 18, 1876, and he began to play ball as soon as he was large enough to take care of himself. His first professional engagement was with the Carlisle Club, of the Cumberland Valley League, in 1895, and he did so well that season, and made such a reputation, that he was engaged by the Roanoke Club, of the Vitginia League, for the season of 1896, playing at short stop on its team. He participated in one hundred and six championship games, ranking sixteenth as a batsman, with a percentage of .222, according to the official averages of the Vitginia League. He accomplished some fine batting and fielding feats during that season, being credited with making seventeen home runs,

His best batting performances to a single game was the making of four safe hits, including a triple bagger, in a game with the Norfolks on April 27, 1800, at Norfolk, Va., and on May 6, at Roanoke, against the Portsmouths, when he made five safe hits, including a home run, two triples and a double bagger. In the following July, at Roanoke, against the Petersburgs, he made four safe hits, including a triple bagger. He has shown up well thus far this year with the Washingtons. His best batting performance in a single game occurred on June 25, at Washington, against the New Yorks, when he made three safe hits, including a home run and a double bagger. The contest between these teams on July 15, at Cleveland, O., was a battle between the pitchers in which Young carried off the honors because he received the better support. The locals were very lively on the bases which greatly aided them in their victry. Two singles and a sacrifuce gave the Brook-lyns their only run in the fourth inning. Burkett singled after two hands were out in the sixth inn-ing, stole second, took third on Grim's low throw and scored on Child's hit. The game started on a wet field, after a delay of half an hour. Good batting and poor fielding by the New Yorks were jumbled up together to such an extent that at one time it was hard to tell who might win. McDermott, late of the Cleveland and Louisville teams, pitched six innings and then gave way to Coleman. Davis' long drive for a home run was a feature, the ball going into the "shooting the chute" lake in far right field. The other long safe hits were a double and triple bagger by Joyce, a triple by Gross and a double by Hartman. Rusie was freely batted, but kept the hits well apart, except in three innings, when he took things easy.

work, but costly errors behind them would offset their effectiveness. After the fourth inning the pitchers settled down and fought out the game. Orth had all the better of the argument until the two closing innings, when the locals batted out a victory. Delebanty hit hard all through, he leading with three safe ones, including a double bagger. The other long safe hits were a triple bagger by Cooley and doubles by Everitt, Ryan and Decker.

The former took on a batting streak in the seventeenth inning and tailled five runs. Both pitchers did good work until the last inning, when the strain began to tell on Newton, who apparently weakened and was freely batted. Weihl led in batting, while the long safe hits were triple baggers by J. Rothfuss and O'Hagan and doubles by Wright, A. Rothfuss and Gettig. The fielding of Hattled and Smith was a feature.

Australians Leave for England.

The Australian ball players who have been on a visit to this country, and played a few games with visit to this country, and played a few games with amateur and picked nine professional teams, left this city July 14 on the American liner St. Paul for England. Those in the party were Manager Harry Musgrove, Charles Over, Charles Kemp, Walter G. Ingleton, Harry S. Irwin, Peter A. McAlister, Rue Ewers, Arthur E. Wiseman, Alfred S. Carter, J. H. Stuckey, John Wallace and Frank Saver.

Saver. "We shall carry out our original intention of a trip around the world," said Mr. Musgrove. "We shall probably play some games in London and other parts of England, and then resume our journey homeward. The American people have been very kind to us, and we shall carry home pleasant recollections of our journey. I desire to say that A. G. Spaiding and James A. Hat fairly outdid themselves in the matter of courtesies toward the team."

team."

In discussing the baseball aspect of the tour, Mr. Musgrove said:

"There has been a disappointment. We have played twenty-six games and lost all but a few. We were surprised by the wonderfully fine point to which Americans have reduced the game. The throwing and fielding are marvelous, and until our players improve in those branches of the sport they cannot hope to compete with Americans."

"What are the prospects of the game in Australia,"

"Its future depends on it being taken up by the schools. At present it is played only by members of cricket clubs, and is doubled up with cricket matches. If the game can be introduced in the schools and taught to the youngsters, it will then have a healthy growth."

The Australians were to have played a game on July 15, at the Polo Grounds, this city, with a team headed by James J. Corbeti, but the boxer claimed a lame back as the reason for declaring of the game.

The Australians are a tride sore over a moth eaten trick played onlithem at Brockton. The coacher of the latter team asked the Australian pitcher to toss the ball to him, claiming it was ripped. The ball was tossed. but the coacher let it roll away and two men scored. The Australians did not like that sort of baseball.

the Nottinghamshire team, played July 12, 13, 14, at Nottingham, Eng., was left unfinished, and, consequently, terminated in a so called draw, although had time permitted the visitors would have doubt-less scored a notable victory. F. W. Ralston re-appeared with the Philadelphia eleven, while F. H. Bates was laid off. The visitors again won the toss, Bates was iaid off. The visitors again won the closs, and they made excellent use of their opportunity of batting first on an almost perfect pitch, compiling the formidable total of 421 before the tenth wicket fell. The chief contributors to this total were A. M. Wood and G. S. Patterson, who gave a magnificent exhibition of batting, putting on 192 for

A defeat for the Philadelphia eleven by an inning and 29 runs was the rather unexpected result of the game with the Gloucestershire eleven July 15, 16, 17, at Bristol. J. H. Scattergood, late of the Harvard University eleven, made his first appearance with the Philadelphia team, taking the place of F. W. Ralston, while F. H. Bates was substituted for C. W. Ralston, while F. H. Bates was substituted for C. Coates. The home team gained an advantage at the outset by winning the toss, and, batting first on a true and hard pitch, put on a total of 283. The highest scorers were W. G. Grace, with 113, and G. L. Jessop, with 101, the pair putting on 162 in partnership before the fourth wicket fell. W. G. Grace, who went in first and was the eighth out, was at the wickets about four hours before he was cleverly caught at point by King, and he gave only one chance, that being after he had completed his century. G. L. Jessop punished the bowling severely and gave a remarkable exhibition of rapid run getting, being only ninety minutes at the wickets. Valuable assistance in run getting was also given by the last five batsmen. The Philadelphians started well in their first inning, H. C. Thayer and A. M. Wood making at before the first wicket fell. G. S. Patterson, who went in at the fall of the second wicket, carried his bat out for a cleverly compiled 59, failing to give a chance during his three hours stay at the wicket. The remainder of the team, however, lent little assistance, with the exception of F. H. Bates and J. H. Scattergood, the former helping Patterson to put on 44 for the seventh wicket. The visitors were compelled to follow their inning, and G. Patterson and J. A. Lester then batted in faultless form for 53 and 62, respectively, and put on 111 in partnership for the second wickets. With a total of 136 for the loss of only two wickets a drawn game was now fully expected, but the remainder of the team failed to make any stand against the bowling of Roberts and Grace, the last eight wickets putting on only 17 runs, and the home team consequently scored a victory by an inning and 20 runs. IN THE GAME between the elevens of Yorkshire and Sussex, July 13, at Sheffield, Eng., Brown and Tunnicliffe, who went in first for the former team, established a record for the most productive partnership for the initial wicket in first class cricket, scoring 37s before the latter was retired. Brown continued batting, and was credited with 311 before he could be disposed of. Brown is the only professional who has scored over 300 in a first class match in England, although this batting feat has been accomplished six times by amateurs, W. G. THREE INTERNATIONAL MATCHES will be played by a visiting English team at Philadelphia, Pa., in September next, two being against a representative eleven and the other against a team of Junior players of that city. The last mentioned contest was decided upon at a recent meeting of the international committee of the Associated Cricket Clubs of Philadelphia, and news of this decision was sent to the various representative clubs in and about that city, with a request that the secretaries forward to the committee lists of the eligible and available young players in their respective clubs. The visiting foreign team will be decided upon by G. S. Patterson, H. P. Eally and M. C. Work, now in England with the Philadelphia team, who have full authority to arrange for the tour of an English team.

the tables on Eddie Bald most effectively on Saturday afternoon, July 17, and in the latter's own yard, so to speak. It was at a race meet of the Fredonia Athletic Club, in the national circuit series, and forty-five hundred persons saw a great race in the one mile open, in which Loughead evened up scores for his defeat by Bald in the one mile and persons for his defeat by Bald in the one mile race of June 12, on the New York circuit. Loughead lost then by a tire's width. Now, however, he won by six inches, the most surprising thing that could have happened in Buffalo, N. Y. Bald made an attempt at the one mile record and did 54%s. for the first half. His chain broke in the last half. He went a half again in 50%s. Goehier, the crack amateur, was pocketed in the half mile open. Detemple, a coming rider, won by a narrow margin over Miller in the record time, for single paced races, of Im. 2s.

The line up for the race of the day was Bald, Loughead, Gardiner, Hoyt, Sexton and Randall, in the order named. A tandem team paced. Fred Hoyt caught the position, with Bald in second place. Loughead and Gardiner had a warm race for Bald's rear wheel, and the Canadian beat the Chicagoan for the position. Gardiner followed Loughead, Randall was fifth, with Seaton, the Louisville examateur, in the rear. The pace was good and positions unchanged until just before the bell, when Randall jumped, with Seaton following him. Two open lengths were opened up on Bald at the bell. The latter was then out after Randall, and closing with him on the backstretch, started around the outside. Loughead did not follow. He and Gardiner were pocketed until an opening occurred in the line just at the pole. Loughead slipped cleverly through, and rounding into the stretch he started for home. The finish was between Bald and the Canadian, Gardiner being pocketed back to the pole. Loughead jumped, and Bald was at his side again, but could not pass him. Loughead rode a hard and steady race, and won by six inches. Free Hoty was third and Gardiner fourt

CHAIRMAN MOTT, of the L. A. W. racing board, has suspended Tom Cooper and Fred Loughead, pending investigation, because of having competed at the unsanctioned meet held at Port Huron, Mich. It is hardly fair to suspend contestants for competing at a meet which they have no reason to suppose has not been sanctioned; if they are to be made to suffer for unwittingly doing wrong, some means more than at present exist of advising them beforehand regarding such meets should be adopted by the board. They certainly do not deserve punishment for competing in good faith.

Captain William Fowler.

Who became widely known in all around sporting circles of the metropolis during his long landiordship of the famous old Sixth Avenue hostelry, the "Knickerbocker Cottage," died suddenly on July 6, at his Summer residence, in Greenville, N. J., aged sixty-nine years. On the previous evening, as had sixty-nine years. On the previous evening, as had been their custom for many years, deceased and his friend Edward Bouton, the only members of the "Club of Two," organized by themselves, entertained a number of their friends at an elaborate dinner in this city. The captain, who was in apparently good health, and appeared in excellent spirits, returned home before midnight, and when a member of the family went to call him the following morning he was found to be dying. Medical aid was immediately summoned, but proved unavailing to save his life. Captain Fowler was a native of New York, and in early life was a contractor and builder, and as such erected a number of the buildings that were prominent in his time. He served in the War of the Rebellion as captain of Company C in the Twelfth Regiment, seeing the struggle through and being wounded at the battles of Antietam and the second Bull Run. He was a member of the Twelfth Regiment Veteran Association, the Grand Army, a member of the Columbian Commandery, F. and A. M., the Hoboken Turtle Club, the Fat Men's Club and the famous Thirteen Club, of which latter he was the originator. Of late years he and his son, William Jr., were engaged in business under the firm name of the Knickerbocker Catering Company. The funeral services were conducted at Scottish Lite Hail, July S. From there tests of a limited number of rounds. From there he went to South Africa, returning to London, Eng., about three years ago. Soon afterwards he was induced to make a match with Ted Pritchard, then the middleweight champion, for a substantial purse, in the British metropoits. The Weight purse, in the British metropoits, the weight at which they were to fight, 154th, was too light for Burke, and in getting down he so weakened himself that he was not able to do himself justice in the ring, and was easily beaten. so weakened himself that he was not able to do himself justice in the ring, and was easily beaten. It is likely that in reducing his weight to the limit he permanently injured his constitution. Soon afterwards he announced his retirement, and he became landlord of the Florence Hotel, islington, London. He recently sold out the business, and with an old comrade, Mr. Collings, of the Gauden Hotel, Clapham, started on a 'cycling tour of the country immediately after the Ascot race meeting, but on arriving at Andoversford Burke fell so lil that it was decided to traved by train to Cheltenham, where they put up at George Wilson's Bellevue Hotel. Dr. Kirkland was called in, and it was decided that three other physicians should be consulted. It was at once seen that the patient's hours were numbered, and, on being informed to this effect, Burke asked that a solicitor might be summoned so that he could make his will, and thus provide for his wife and child. His friends were brought to his bedside and, though knowing that death was simply a question of minutes, deceased preserved his cheeriness to the end. The funeral took place at Norwood Cemetery, July 5. The comin, which was covered with beautiful wreaths was borne to its last resting place by Dan McGannon, Alf Mitchell, Dick Burge, Ted Pritchard, Barney Shepperd and Jack Welland, and it bore the inscription: "John Burke. Born Sept. 3, 1861; died June '9, 1871."

"KID" MCPARTLAND AND TOMMY RYAN, the latter of Philadelphia, Pa., met at the arena of the South Beach Athletic Club, Staten Island, on Monday evening, July 19, having been matched to fight twenty rounds at catch weight. There was a fair sized crowd to witness the milling, which was over in quick order, as Ryan, after being hammered all over the ring and knocked down thrice, was declared the loser at the end of 2m. 28s. Ed. Muntzer and Joe Falvey also engaged in a bout, limited to ten rounds, at 125th, which was a pretty lively contest, terminating in a draw. Joe Choynski was the referee.

In fact all Musicians, Dancers and others interested, to take notice that we have just published No. 2 of "Hardings Famous Jigs, Reels and Dances" for the Pianoforte, Violin or Flute, or can be played by Violin and Piano as duets; the book contains 100 complete and unabridged, and will be found of great value to Musical Directors and others in the profession. It contains Buck and Wing Dances, Essences, Stop Jigs, Irish Jigs, Straight Jigs, Reels, Hornpipes, Drones, Fings, Country Dances, Eccentric Dances, Costernoger Bances, Trybe Jigs, Scotth Jigs, Burlesque Reels, etc. Send for No. 2

FRICE 50 CENTS, POSTPAID.

NOTE.—Most of these dances will sound still brighter and livelier on the piano if played an octave higher than written in right hand part, or, by playing as written the first time and then an octave higher at repetition of strain. They are arranged in their present position in order that they may be readily played on the Violin, Flute, etc. If they were written up in the higher octave it would be difficult for Violinists, Flutists, etc. or play an octave higher. Professional Planists can, of course, "fill in" and "double up" these accompaniments ad lib, if necessary.

Harding's Famous Collection of Jigs, Reels and Dances. Nos. 1 and 2, are Copyrighted by Frank Harding. Either book will be sent postpaid upon receipt of 50 cents in stamps or P. O. order Address all orders to FRANK HARDINGS MUSIC OFFICE, 1293 Broadway, N. Y. (Charles M. Connolly, Music arranged and composed. Address or call at our office.)
